Tax Cuts vs. More Spending THE PRESIDENT JUST WANTS TO SPEND THE MONEY

10 September 1999

- < The President's advisors are claiming our tax bill would force 50-percent reductions in essential government services.
- < But the truth is that the President just wants to spend the money rather than give it back to America's families.
 - The President's budget calls for busting the discretionary spending caps by $35 billion in fiscal year 2000 alone.
 - He also has proposed $937 billion in new spending programs over the next 10 years.
- < The White House warnings about the effects of our tax bill are distortions and scare tactics that serve no useful purpose:
 - First, their figures do not even use numbers consistent with the budget resolution passed by Congress.
 - Second, according to OMB, these alleged cuts wouldn't even begin to occur until 2009.
- < The President should reject these scare tactics and sign the tax relief measure for America's families.
